U. S. Given Sweeping Injunction

Attorney General Daugherty Takes Steps To Stop Union Interference With Operation of Railroads

(By Associated Press)
Chicago, Sept. 1.—The Federal government today was granted a sweeping temporary injunction against the six striking shopcraft unions, their officials and members from interfering in any way with the operation of railroads and their properties. The order will remain in force until September 11th, pending a hearing of the government's application for a permanent injunction.

The suit which is the most sweeping in recent years, is intended to keep the railroads operating and free from any interference or obstruction of any kind whatsoever according to government officials.

"The underlying principle involved in this action," said Attorney General Daugherty to the court in asking for the injunction, "is the survival and supremacy of the government of the United States."

Daugherty said his plea for the injunction was made necessary by the fact that "there comes a time in the history of all nations when the people must be advised whether they have a government or not." He said it is not a move to destroy the unions or prevent the unions destroying the open shop, but declared "when a man is not permitted to engage in lawful toil, whether a member of the union or not, the death knell of liberty will be sounded and anarchy will supersede organized government." He declared the unions cannot dictate to the American Union and when the unions claim that right then the government will destroy the unions for the government of the United States is supreme and must endure.

An Earlier Story

(By Associated Press)
Chicago, Sept. 1.—Suit for an injunction against all striking employees of the railroads of the United States and their union officials was filed in federal court here today by Attorney General Daugherty. The suit was filed shortly after his arrival here. The plea for the injunction named the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor, six striking shopcraft and 120 system federations. It seeks to restrain all strikers from interfering in any way with the operation of the railroads.

The application is sweeping in its character and is sought to prevent all interference with operation of trains or railroad property in any way. It specifically named the presidents of various union organizations involved in the present strike which started July 1st last, following the wage decision of the Railway Labor Board on reduction of wages of employees thru out the country.

The suit also enjoined against conspiring to interfere with or hinder the railway companies in the conduct of their lawful business and carriage of mails or injure any man or hinder any employee while going to or returning from the premises of the railway companies at any time or place by display of force of numbers or by making threats, jeers or suggestions of danger, taunts or entreaties, and would extend the protection of the proposed injunction even to those contemplating entering employment of railway companies.

Bombshell To Labor Leaders

(By Associated Press)
Washington, Sept. 1.—President Johnson, of the Machinists' union, said here today that the Chicago suit would not make the leaders of the striking shopmen abate their attempts to make the strike effective. He asserted it would "take more than a mere injunction to prevent complete collapse of some of these railroads within the next 30 days," and added "we are not afraid of anything the court can do." Word of the Chicago court action, however, had a bombshell effect among labor leaders generally and there were many expressions of surprise among government officials themselves.

HUNG JURY IS RESULT OF TRIAL OF TODD

Who Is Charged With Poisoning Boen Stock—Stevens Held To Grand Jury

James Todd, colored, 16 years of age, appeared before Judge Goodloe in county court Friday morning to answer charges against him of poisoning the stock of Z. A. Boen. The trial resulted in a hung jury.

Mr. Boen was the first witness to take the stand. He testified that he had come upon Todd while the latter was stealing coal from the place of Dave Powers. He said that he ordered Todd to stop but he walked a few steps with the coal, set it against the fence and told Boen that he would make him pay $1,000 for this before he was through with him. He started running and Boen took out after him, but the lad was too swift for him.

This happened on Saturday about three weeks ago and on the following Tuesday night Boen had six fine hogs and one horse poisoned. The hogs died the same day, but the horse lived about two and a half days before it died. Mr. Boen stated that he had found the water the horse had drunk to be a strange red color.

Ches Sams, a neighbor of Boen, testified that he saw Boen catch the negro, make him put the coal down and chase him away. He did not see the lad's face, however, and could not tell whether it was Todd or not.

Mrs. Pritchett, who is also a neighbor of Mr. Boen, stated that she had seen him in his effort to catch the negro but could not identify Todd as being the one. Several witnesses testified as to the character of Todd, which was not as good as it might have been.

Todd said that he was in Corbin from Monday until Tuesday evening when the stock was poisoned. His mother, Della Campbell, testified that he was in his bed early Tuesday evening and also Thursday evening when the barn of Mr. Boen was destroyed by fire. Thursday evening it was proved that he had visited the Watts home, another colored family, and returned home about ten o'clock. His mother stated that he was in bed, asleep when she arose to see where the fire was.

The testimony of Dr. Mainhart, veterinarian, probably did more to save Todd than any other. He stated that the stock of Boen's died from a disease something like ptomaine poisoning. He also said that when Mr. Boen called him up to see from what his stock might have died, he told him that spoiled food probably caused their death and that Mr. Boen admitted having given the hogs some corn that was bad. He said that he told Mr. Boen that his horse probably died from eating the same thing.

Otis Stevens, of Red Lick, came before Judge Goodloe in his examining trial for having moonshine equipment in his possession. He was held to await the action of the grand jury. He was put under arrest several weeks ago by Sheriff Deatherage and a federal officer. They traced hide tracks from an old still sight to Stevens' home, finding stilling equipment on the way and several barrels that had only lately been emptied of beer.

$5,100 REWARD FOR PADUCAH BOMBERS

Paducah, Ky., Sept. 1.—Citizens up to noon today raised a reward of $5,100 and offered it for the apprehension of persons, who last night dynamited the homes of employees of the Illinois Central railroad. Heavy details of police are also on duty today. Striking shopmen contributed $100 to the reward.

Washington, Sept. 1.—The four billion dollar soldier's bonus bill was passed Thursday by the Senate and now goes to conference. The vote was 47 to 22, with party lines wiped out. The roll call follows:

Democrats—Dial, Glass, Myers, Shields, Swanson, Underwood and Williams—7. Total 22.
Three Senators were present and unable to vote because of airs, and 24 Senators, 16 republicans and 8 democrats were absent. Among the pairs announced were: Stanley, for; Ernst, against.

The lineup showed 33 Senators against the bill, or sufficient number to prevent its passage in the event President Harding vetoed it as many believe he will. The roll call, however, showed one more than a two-thirds majority of those present and voting in favor of the bill.

Immediately after the passage of the measure, the Senate directed that it be returned to the House with a request for a conference.

The Senate conferees named are those who are working on the tariff bill and the House is expected to appoint its manager on the tariff measure. Since there is no serious dispute between the two houses on the bonus the conferees are expected to lay aside the tariff long enough to agree to a report on the bonus.

BIG LABOR LEADER'S LABOR DAY MESSAGE

(By Associated Press)

Indianapolis, Sept. 1.—Powerful forces are at work to break down organized labor and "deal with it on the same basis that some persons deal with their horses and mules," according to John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, in a Labor Day statement issued today.

"These forces regard labor as a piece of property which they own and must control," he continued. "They fail to take into consideration the human element in labor. It is their avowed purpose to reduce the workingman to such a low level of existence that he will be unable to defend himself against any form of brutality and starvation that the employer might wish to inflict."

"Since Labor Day, 1921, this conflict has raged with increasing intensity until it has engulfed the entire nation in industrial strife."

"But labor still stands, its columns unbroken, and it will continue to stand to the end of the fight. Organized labor cannot be destroyed. It is here to stay. Those employers and those interests that are now working so hard to wipe it out should learn the best way to deal with labor is to be fair and just."

"Let us hope that this vicious attack may cease so that there may be permanent industrial peace in America. Labor stands ready to do its part in bringing about that happy condition. Labor expressed the fervent hope that the great American public will take such an interest in industrial affairs as to make it possible for organized labor and employers to live together in harmonious relationship."

CARPENTER GIVES STIRRING MESSAGE

To International Convention of Disciples—Richmond Preacher Strikes High Notes

(By Associated Press)

Winona Lake, Ind., Sept. 1.—The principles of christianity alone can heal the social and economic ills of the world and the minister of the local church is the key to the success of the whole missionary enterprise, Dr. Homer W. Carpenter, pastor of the First Christian church of Richmond, Ky., today told the International Convention of Disciples of Christ. His subject was "For Such An Hour As This."

At the heart of a dramatic conversation between Mordecai, an ancient Jew, and beautiful Esther, queen of Ahasuerus, is this significant question, "Who knoweth but that thou art come into the kingdom for such an hour as this?" This question of the long ago is still vibrant with meaning in our modern world and must seem peculiarly personal to every religious leader of our day, said Dr. Carpenter. For such an hour as this! What time is it in history? In the ongoing of God's great plan, what is the hour striking now on the dial? Ask General Smuts, South African statesman, and he answers back, "It is God's great creative hour."

Ask Rabindranath Tagore, mystic of the east, and in musical words he replies, "Behind the patient dawn of the east, the morning waiteth, meek and silent." Ask Fletcher Brockman and he will say, "Here today all the past finds its focus and all the future finds its beginning."

Ask Hamilton Holt and his answer is this, "Today is the beginning of a modern world." Whatever these may mean by such mysterious and prophetic phrases, without any sort of doubt they interpret the mind of our day as it senses the unusual, the urgent and the strategic.

There are certain facts in connection with our present day which cannot have escaped even the casual observer of current events. The first is this, that the world order in which we live is one of desperate extremity. A metropolitan newspaper of a few months ago carried on the front page of the same issue two strange and significant headlines. The one said "Millions Starving in the East." On the same front page there was another headline "Farmers Burn Corn for Fuel in the Middle West." You will agree that an economic order in which millions die for want of food, while on the other side of the world men burn food for fuel, because there is no market for it, is one of desperate extremity.

America was startled a few days ago as the cables clicked back from Genoa the declaration of Lloyd George that a great war involving the leading nations of the world was not only possible but probable in Europe at an early date. It was the declaration not of a lurid newspaper reporter but of the most powerful statesman of our day. And this with the battlefields of three continents scarcely cleared of their millions of dead, and with these same nations still staggering under the burden of the late war. There are many other facts such as these that would add their witness, facts as startling as they are inescapable. The clock of history is striking the hour of desperate extremity.

The second fact is this, that the religion of Christ is the only way out. In the presence of the tragic and colossal failure of the philosophy of materialism and in the light of the nation's history of these thousands of years, the better minds of our time almost unanimously bear witness to the fact that the principles of Christianity alone can heal our social and economic ills, save the nations from savagery of war and build a world order which shall be for the common good of the total race. Bergson declares that the need of the hour is the recovery of spiritual control. He says that our bodies have become too big for our souls. Bernard Shaw, (Continued on page 4)

MISS OLMSTEAD

Friends of Deaconess Emily Olmstead in Richmond will be interested in reading the tribute to her by the Bulletin of Missions, published in Nashville, Tenn. It is as follows:

In behalf of all who loved and honored our president, Miss Emily Olmstead, we wish to express our love, sympathy, and deep appreciation to Deaconess Emily Olmstead, who has served as secretary to Miss Bennett during the past four years and in all things has been her helper, her joy and her comfort. Without her service would have been impossible, so much had she come to depend on this friend for sympathy and help. Together they have spent hours in labor and prayer for the interests of the kingdom. When the desperate illness came the deaconess was still and dependable to Miss Bennett and to us. She did not spare herself in behalf of either, for she ministered constantly to the dear sick one, even as a daughter would have ministered, while at the same time she kept friends in touch with the patient's condition. Since all who loved Miss Bennett longed to serve as did this deaconess, she has been our representative, through her we have loved and served.

MONKEY-FACE OWL TO BE SHOWN AT BIG FAIR

Colby A. Taylor To Take Strange Bird To Louisville Together With Fine Pheasants

Colby A. Taylor, of Louisville, has a monkey-faced owl which he is taking to the fair at Louisville by Colby A. Taylor, of Richmond. The owl will be sent to the big show along with a remarkable exhibit on pheasants which Mr. Taylor has and is taking to the fair at the express and earnest invitation of the State Fair management.

Few here knew that Mr. Taylor had this owl, which is a rare and unusual species. It was captured near Speedwell, this county, about a month ago. There were two of them but one seemed to have been injured in pulling it one of a hole in a tree in which they had taken refuge, and it died shortly thereafter. Mr. Taylor bought the strange bird for $4 from its captor and has been caring for it and feeding it ever since. It is very ferocious and prefers a diet of live sparrows to anything else. It is almost a harrowing sight to see the owl, clutching the quivering bird with one strong claw, cut its throat with its sharp beak and then gulp the carcass down in one mouthful. Mr. Taylor says that the owl is so fond of its diet of sparrows that unless given them, it will often go two or three days without eating, disdaining beef that may be thrown in its cage.

Although he is an authority on pheasants and other varieties of poultry, Mr. Taylor knew little of this variety of the owl family when he secured it. However, he wrote to leading ornithologists and the president of the University of Kansas, answered him fully about this species of owl, which is so rare and has such a strange resemblance to a monkey or a human being. He said that these birds are natives of Yucatan, in Mexico, and that they are undoubtedly caught up in some terrific windstorm or hurricane and whirled through space many miles, to have been found here. Mr. Taylor thinks the bird only about half or two-thirds grown. It is white and mixed yellow color, sprinkled with dark brown beads. The appearance of its face is really uncanny, and it rolls its brown eyes and glares out of them, in a very human sort of way. When a person stands in front of its cage, it lowers its head, and wags it from side to side, in a threatening manner.

Mr. Taylor says he may try to sell the bird to some zoological garden or fancier while at the fair. Pheasants will attract wide attention at the fair. Mr. Taylor is probably the only authority on pheasant in this state. The State Game Commission is paying a bounty on pheasants, for his birds to be shown there, sending trucks here for them. Mr. Taylor expects to be down about 18 birds, altogether, and they will include some beautiful specimens, rare and fine. Among them will be two Golden Pheasant cocks, one pair of Reeves pheasants, one pair of Mongolian pheasants, one pair of Siberian white pheasants, one pair of Chinese ring-necked pheasants, one pair of silver pheasants, a pair of wood ducks and the monkey-faced owl.

The State Fair authorities told Mr. Taylor that no one else in the state has such a collection of pheasants as he does. Mr. Taylor says that he is unable to satisfy the demand for pheasants, and ships them to all parts of the country. He recently shipped a pair of birds to California, which he sold for $50.

Of the eight colts sold at Saratoga a year ago this month for $10,000 or more each not one has won a race, the low priced horses being the winners. Yet the breeding industry is healthier than ever, as the August sales at Saratoga show.
